

The background features a complex network of blue lines and arrows. Some lines are solid, while others are dashed. The arrows point in various directions, creating a sense of movement and interconnectedness. The overall aesthetic is clean and modern, with a focus on geometric patterns.

UB CAPABLE GIRLS:

A Capabilities Approach to the Sexual Rights & Resources of Young Women in Buffalo

Project Framework

- Philosopher Martha Nussbaum developed the Capabilities Approach as a way to pursue social justice.
- She argued that justice is not a matter of having “rights on paper,” but of ensuring that all individuals are equally able to actually access and exercise those rights (i.e., they are true capabilities).
- Using a Capabilities Approach means asking the general question:
What are people actually able to do and to be?
- The current project specifically asks:

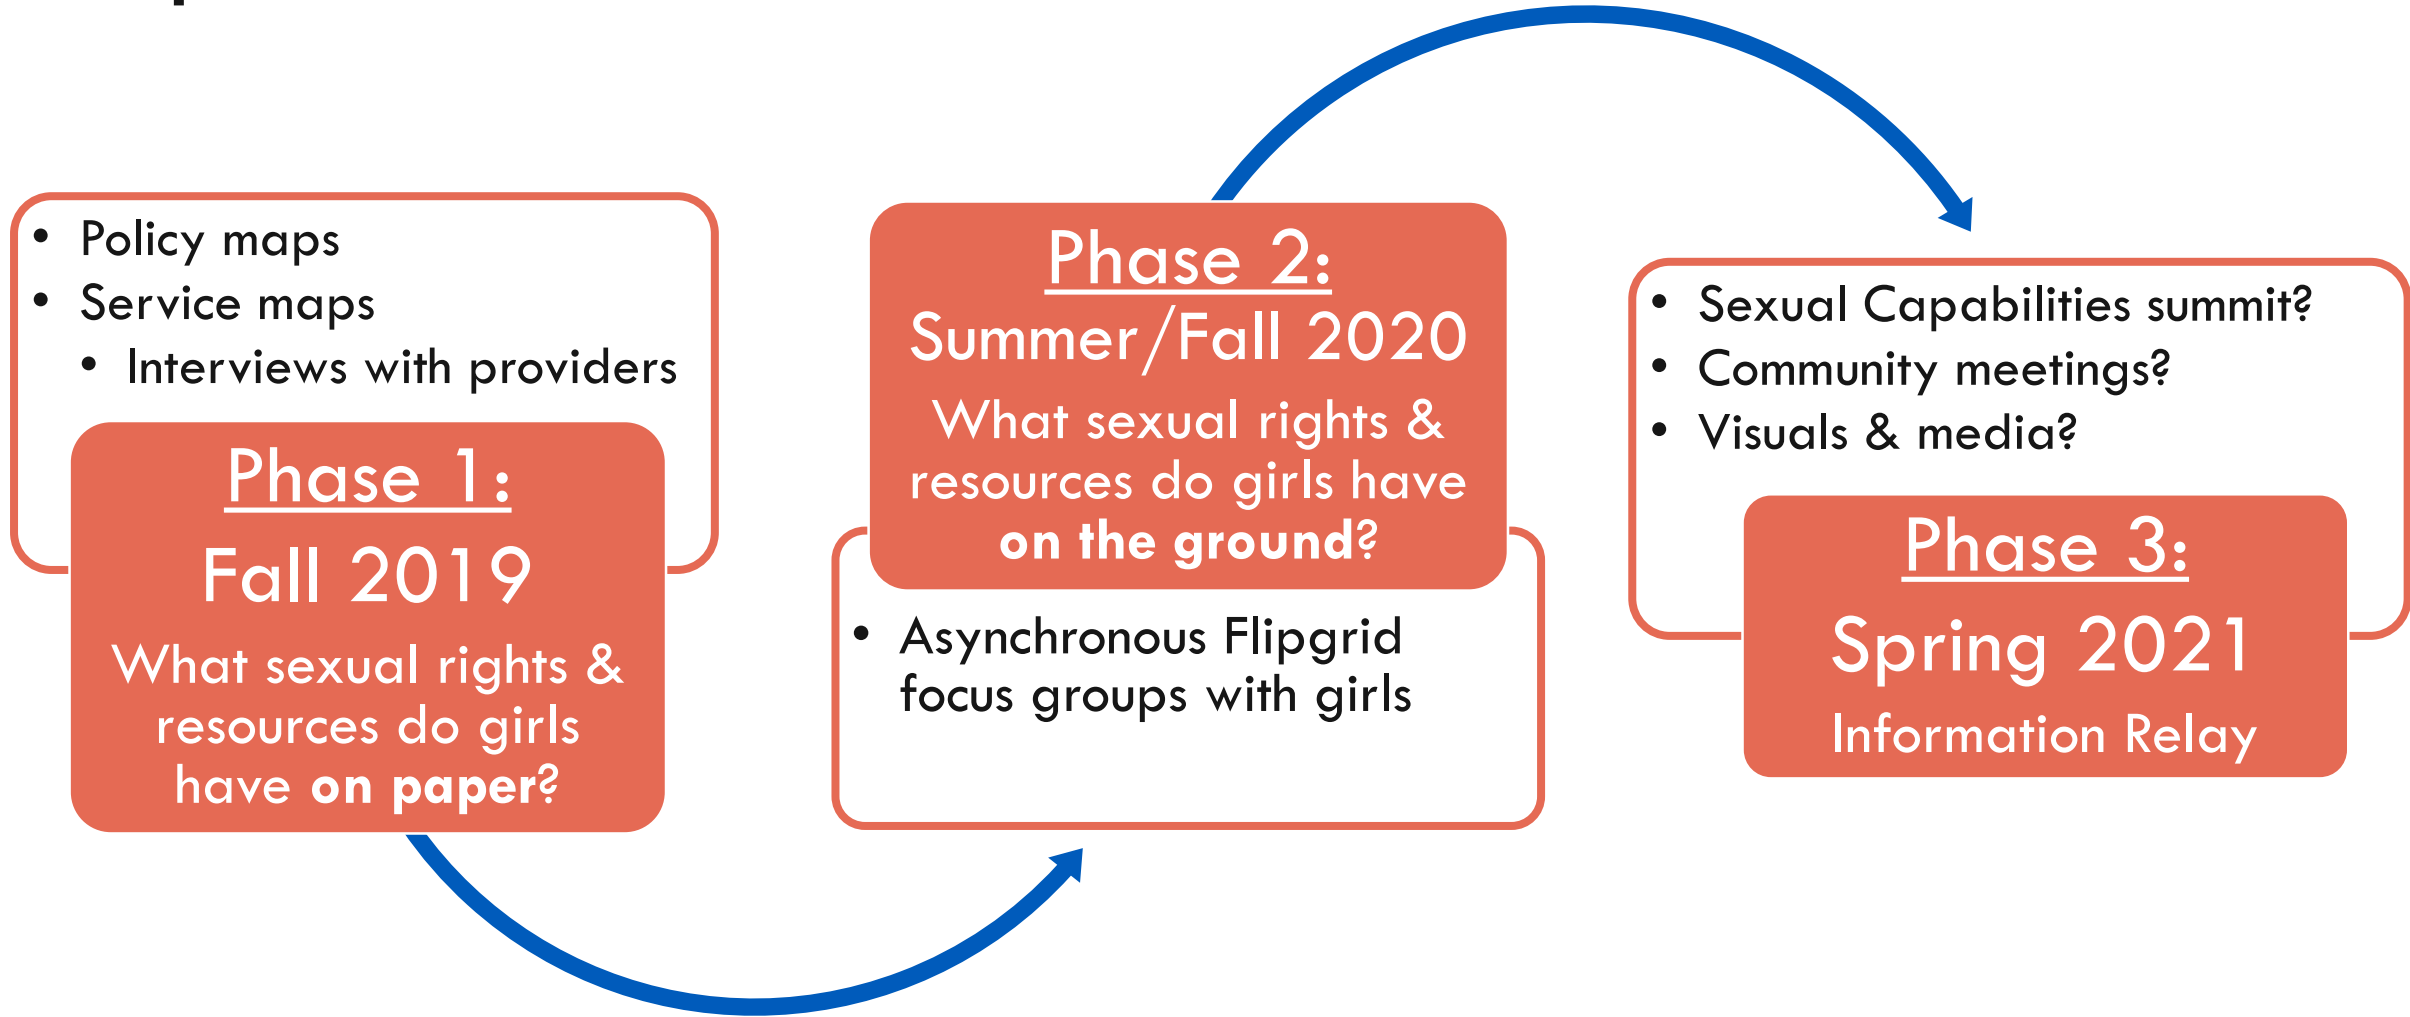

What are girls in Buffalo actually able to do and to be when it comes to their sexual lives?

Project Objectives

Using the Capabilities Approach as a theoretical framework, we will:

1. Examine the sexual rights and resources to which girls in Buffalo are technically entitled; [the polices and services that exist on paper]
2. Assess the extent to which those rights and resources are actually accessible and to whom; [the policies and services that girls see on the ground]
3. Relay information to Buffalo providers and policymakers about the gap between girls' sexual rights and resources on paper and those on the ground.

Project Phases & Timeline

Project Team

Laina Bay-Cheng, MSW, PhD [Principal Investigator]
Studies the impact of social injustice on young women's sexuality

Hannah Ginn, MSW, PhD student
Experience as a sex educator for people with intellectual & developmental disabilities

Jessica Mencia, MSW/PhD student
Experience advocating for reproductive justice and against gender-based violence

Honour Odigie, MSW, PhD student
Experience working at the intersection of gender, immigration, trafficking, & sex work

CONTACT:

ub-capablegirls@buffalo.edu

(716) 259-1264

@ubcapablegirls

